New Livery Stables.—Fire_Proof.

Having completed my new Livery Stables, I am now ready to receive Horses at livery, by the day, My Stables are situated on the corner of Princess and Third Streets, directly opposite the Court-House, and very convenient to the business part of the town. They are built of brick, After a and covered with tin, which makes them entirely FIRE-PROOF. They are large, commodious, and well constructed; and in every respect as comfortable and convenient as any Stables in the United States I also have (for the accommodation of Drovers,) a large and comfortable Lot, together with a basement under the Stables sufficient to hold one hundred horses, and shelter them well and comfortably.

HORSES, CARRIAGES, and BUGGIES, kept constantly for hire. My Hostlers cannot be surpassed in any country, and I therefore feel confident of giving entire satisfaction to those who favor me with their custom. I feel grateful to my friends and the public for their liberal patronage heretofore, and hope to merit a continuance of their spectacle or famous leader.

Early in the morning, my slumbers had been broken by the sharp crack of his ancient musket: I looked upon that musket with reverence, for it had seen service in the war, firing salutes in the honor of TUST B ceived, per Schr. Wm. Hart, from Post a- the day. I am free to confess, my military propensities were far from strong enough, appropriate as they might have been considered at such a time, to sup press certain peevish exclamations towards the disturber of my sweet repose. In the course of the forenoon, I attended the ceremonials observed in the village; sat, during the usual patriotic address, on the same bench with a time-worn veteran that had fought in the contest now commemorated; witnessed the evolutions of the uniform company; and returned home with a most excellent appetite for my dinner.

The afternoon was warm and drowsy. I ensconced myself in my easy chair, near an open window; feeling in that most blissful state of semi-somnolency. which it is now and then, though rarely, given to mortals to enjoy. I was alone, the family of my host having gone on some visit to a neighbor. The bees hummed in the garden, and among the flowers that clus tered over the widow frame; a sleepy influence seemed to imbue every thing around. Occasionally the faint sound of some random gun-fire from the village would float along, or the just perceptible music of the band, or the tra a a-ra of a locust. But these were far from being jars to the quiet spirit I have mentioned.
